Drew Fulcher, a welding student at Winston-Louisville Career and Technology Center, is being honored by the Mississippi Construction Education Foundation as student of the month for the state’s north central region.

Boasting strong academic and attendance records, Fulcher is a standout in state and national craft competitions. A three-year member of SkillsUSA, his wins as the state’s best in 2015 and 2016 earned him back-to-back trips to the national competition, where he finished in the top 10 both years.

Fulcher is a senior at Nanih Waiya High School, where he plays football and is a member of the NW Letterman Club. He is active in his community, having spent many hours assisting victims following the devastating 2014 tornado that struck Winston County.

Upon graduation, Fulcher plans to earn his associate degree in welding and work as a manufacturing or offshore welder.
